What is genocide?

Genocide is a term created during the Holocaust and declared an international crime in the 1948 United Nations Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide. It means the destruction of a race.

Genocide

The Threat in Darfur

Today, Sudan's civilian population faces threats from continuing and potentially new violence. Conflict continues in the Darfur region, where over 2 million people--a third of the population--are displaced.

Why Genocide is Happening

The government-backed militia has carried out atrocities against the local population, including the destruction of hundreds of villages, the murder of thousands of people and the rape and assault of thousands of woman and girls.

Groups Who Are Fighting

The Darfur region of Sudan is home to racially mixed tribes of settled peasants, who identify as African, and nomadic herders, who identify as Arab. The majority of people in both groups are Muslim.

Attackers

Janjaweed, a government-supported militia recruited from local Arab

People killed from Darfur

The genocide in Darfur has claimed 400,000 lives and displaced over 2,500,000 people. More than one hundred people continue to die each day; five thousand die every month.

Reason For Starting The Conflict

It all started when Omar al-bashir came into Darfur and tried to take control of the president. Omar was a dictatorship. So of course the people in Darfur didn't like it so they took control in there hands and attacked back.

The image features a hypnotic spiral background composed of concentric circles in shades of red and black. The spiral starts from a dark blue/black center and expands outwards. Overlaid on this background is the text "That's all Folks!" written in a white, elegant cursive font. The text is positioned horizontally across the middle of the spiral, with the word "That's" on the left, "all" in the center, and "Folks!" on the right. The exclamation point is prominent at the end of the phrase.

That's all Folks!
